Since Mr. Shell's departure the woman has seldom been seen out of doors. Her poultry was neglected, and she has seemed demented, wearing a haggard look for days.

Mr. McDowel, a neighbor, visited her yesterday and found all the doors fastened, but succeeded in gaining an entrance through a window. Mrs. Snell showed fight, but Mrs. McDowel soon calmed her. There was no food in the house of any kind, and when food was brought her she refused to touch it and was literally starving to death.

The Selectmen were notified of the condition of things several days ago, but nothing had been done by the authorities to ameliorate her condition.

Forger James E. Bedell did not look as chipper as usual when visited by an Evening World reporter this morning. He had had very little sleep and complained that his cellmate. Green-goods Man Townsend, had kept him awake all night telling him alleged funny stories.

Bedell swears that the stories were all chestnuts with long flowing whiskers on them and that they nearly drove him crazy. He wants the Warden either to suppress Townsend or put him in another cell. The supply of cigars furnished by Bedell's brother had been exhausted, and the latter threatens to cut them down to cheroots or paper cigarettes, unless the prisoners moderate their extravaces.

At the office of Shipman, Barlow, Larcoque & Choate it was stated that the firm proposed to settle with all its clients who had been defrauded by the operations of Bedell in the same manner as they had disposed of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, with certified checks to the amount of their losses. These amounts were now being computed, and it might be several days before all these matters had been satisfactorily closed up.

It was also stated that no change had been made in the complaint to which B-dell had demurred at his last appearance in court, and that he would be forced to plead to it, or go to the Grand Jury.

GOT HIM THIS MORNING

SARAH BURKE'S WEDDING ONLY POST-PONED FOR A NIGHT.

Her Martin Judge and Herself Stood Before Father O'Callaghan at an Early Breakfast Hour-A Youthful Brother Who Had Strong Objections to the Match for Household Reasons.

If there is any truth in the proverb about the course of true love never running smooth then the love of Sarah Burke and Martin Judge is the genuine thing. Last night, at the hour when Sarah had hoped to be plighting her blushing troth to her young Lochinvar, she stood with tears in her bright eyes before Sergt. Lynch, of the Twentieth street station-house and sobbingly averred that her fiance was held in durance vile by his sister, Miss Judge. Even to the sergeant it was clearly a case of Miss-Judgment.

"Can't you go with me and get him? plead Sarah. The Sergeant gently explained to the tearful bride that was to have been that he had no jurisdiction. We were going to get married this evening, and I waited for him at the church, and the priest was all ready, and Martin didn't come. Poor fellow, he couldn't. His sister had given him liquor and was keeping him fast in a room. Can't you get him for me?" The Sergeant couldn't and Miss Burke departed in a state of dismal sorrow.

This morning an EVENING WOBLD reporter called at the family residence of the Burkes, 451 East Sixteenth street, third floor, front, to see how the fair Sarah was bearing up. Master Patrick Burke, a young gentleman of fourteen years, whose hair was as short as it could be made without injury to the roots, was the only member of the household at home. He delivered himself with much volubility on the subject of his sister's marriage, and fully shared the objections to the marriage which are entertained by the Burke and Judge families.

"I don't want her to go," he said. "She's the only one to tidy up the house." From the somewhat dishevelled air of the rooms, it was but too evident that Sarah's gentle hands had done no tidying for some time. Pat was induced to seek his sister and ask an audience of her for the reporter. After some moments' absence, he came upstairs followed by two young girls, one upstairs followed by two young girls, one with blonde locks and the other a pretty brunette with a bang and a tip-tilted nose.

"That's her." Pat said, pointing a somewhat discianful finger at the latter.

"How about Martin Judge, Miss Burke?" asked the reporter.

"Oh, we were married at 7 o'clock this morning," she replied with animation.
"Martin came around here early, and we went to the church, and Father O'Callaghan married us. She was best girl," Mrs. Judge continued, looking at her companion, "and her name is Katie Barrett. Martin's cousin was best man. I'm just back."

Sarah did not have a very pronounced bridal air. She was attired in a wine-colored dress, and her dark locks were slightly frowzy. Her brother Pat, and a smail pirl, who had inserted herself into the group, stood on the stairs and interpolated unpleasant remarks, which visibly ruffled Mrs. Judge's temper.

Judge's temper.
Was Martin under the influence of liquor last night when his sister detained him?" inquired the reporter.
"Oh, he was a little full," said Sarah,

Oh, he was a little full, "said Saran, airily.
"He was paralyzed drunk," said Master Pat, unfeelingly.
"Shut up! What's the matter with you?" cried Mrs. Judge, sharply. "They're my brother and sister," she added, but whether as introduction or as a statement objurgatory of its very nature under the circumstances the reporter had to conjecture.

"He was sober all right this morning," she went on. Mrs. Judge's back hair came down at this juncture, and she proceeded to do it up, continuing her conversation for two or three minutes with five hairpins between her

"I'm glad I've got a man that can make a living or me. There's the ring," and she displayed with wiley dignity a plain gold circle on her third finger.

"Oh, he had to go to work. He is a laboring man."

The reporter congratulated the young bride, and on his way downtown called on Father O'Callaghan, who said, sure enough, that he had married the pair at 7.30 o'clock.

There was a wild rumor in circulation this morning that Foster had been captured not very far from this city, and that the authorities were making strenuous efforts to compelhim to disgorge some of his stealings, upon the promise that he would not be dealt with so severely if he would make some kind of settlement. The rumor could not be traced to any source, nor could it in any way be verified.

How the Democrats Will Spread Light on the Tariff Question.

ALBANY, Oct. 3. - Men are yet living in the State who recall the enthusiasm created by the passage of the first boat through the Eric Canal which heralded its formal opening to the commerce of the country.

The boat left Buffalo to the boom of can-nons, and all along its course to Albany cannons, and all along its course to Albany cannous signalled its approach.

The loading men in the State at the time met it with addresses at different points, and the banks were lined with hundreds to watch the transit of the boat.

All this is by the way of preface.

'The students of maxims' in this State have borrowed an idea from history and mean to turn it to the uses of the campaign.

The Young Men's Democratic clubs of this State next week will send through the Eric Canal a vessel loaded with speakers and documents to spread through the Empire
State, from Buffalo to Albany, the doctrine of lower taxes of Cleveland and tariff reform.
The project originated with ex-Mayor John ireworks and colored fires to herald its coming by night.

The design will be to bring tariff reform close home to the voters of each particular stopping-place, and to facilitate this work a library will be carried on board, giving as full detail as possible of the interests of the counties which the sanal traverses.

The speakers on the boat will be Congressman Clifton R. Breckenridge, who has the most accurate knowledge of the details of the Mills bill of any man in Congress: ex-Mayor Thacher, H. B. Clifford, the stereopticon speaker, and several younger men.

Thacher, H. B. Clifford, the stereopticon speaker, and several younger men.

All along the line the party will be met by local speakers, and Gov. Hill, Congressman Mills and Bourke Cockran and prominent speakers are expected to join the party at different points.

The vessel leaves Buffalo on Monday afternoon during the big Democratic barbecue, to beld at that time. From there on the boat will go on its way, stopping at the larger places for meetings afternoons and evenings for two weeks. These meetings will be announced in advance. The boat will the up to the bank, the platform put in place and addresses will be delivered by the crew aboard and by local speakers.

A big stereopticon is to illustrate as many features of the addresses and carry home as many facts as possible.

Every Person Arrested for the Whitechape

PRPECIAL CARLE TO THE EVENING WORLD. LONDON, Oct. 3.-The last arrest in the Whitechapel section was of a crazy man, on whose cost were a number of blood stains. His innocence of the murders was soon established. Not a person is in custody, all who have been arrested having proved their good character. There was nothing even on which to hold the tail man with a dark beard, who wore an American slouch hat, who, it will be recalled, was regarded with so much suspicion by the able Coroner.

At the inquest on the body of the woman found off Berners street Sunday morning s sister stated that at 1.20 Sunday morning she heard kisses and a sound which she thought was made by a person falling to the ground. This was owing to the absence of Judge Barrett in Colorado, where his only daughter is dying of consumption.

Dr. Reynolds was in court. He is a tall, well-built man of middle age, with soft, glossy, brown side whiskers.

He is reputed to be worth fully $300,000, and has an income of $20,000 a year. His wife, who was also in court was the daughter of the late Oliver Charlock, President of the Long Island Railroad.

Mr. Townsend in urging the trial to-day said that it would take two weeks to try the case, as he had forty witnesses and the people had thirty more, and his clients were under a stigma.

This so angered the man's partner that he sprang from his seat and dealt Larkins some half dozen blows over the head with a black jack, inflicting severe scalp wounds.

Inspector Byrnes was able to be up to-day, and it is expected he will be out on Monday.

This is opening week at Bloomingdale's, and their vast establishment at Third avenue and Fifty-ninth street is aglow with the latest fashions. The display surpasses in point of magnitude and grandeur anything heretofore attempted even by this progressive house. The spacious millinery and cloak pariors on the second floor were througed all day yesterday with pretty, well-dressed women, and expressions of admiration for the levely bonnets and charming evening costumes were heard on all sides. The high character of the opening exhibit and the immense number of ladies who were present are pretty sure indications of a great Fall trade at Bloomingdale's.

reports from Chicago that there was a good deal of curb trading going on in the Western market and that sales of December wheat had been made at 115. This option had closed last night at 108%. Private despatches were freely exhibited among the crowd which began to gather about the grain pit as early as 10 o'clock, and one of them said that the feeling at Chicago was so uncertain that brokers would not trade under a margin of 10 cents either way; that they did not regard it as sale without such protection.

The excitement was unparalleled and continued to increase as the Chicago operator kept putting up the figures on his blackboard.

The first quotation for December, which is now the principal speculative option, was 111, an advance of 2½ cents since yesterday.

Within ten minutes after the opening, however, it had been run up to 113½, while the New York crowd followed in the wake, and the highest point reached here was 117½.

After that Chicago reacted to 114½, and New York fell to the same figure, the bullish feeling not being so strong as at Chicago, where the influence of the recent corner in the September option is still strong.

It is estimated that from six million to ten million bushels of wheat were traded in on the floor of the local Exchange within the first quarter of an hour after the opening.

One of the most persistent bulls on the market said to-day after watching the shake-up at the opening:

SUGAR REFINERY LOCKOUT.

INDIGNANT AT THE TRUST. De Castro & Donner's Establishment Shu Down by Order of President Havemeyer and Without Notice to the Men-All Information Refused by the Firm-Is Its Purpose to Raise the Price of Sugar ?

De Castro & Donner's sugar refinery, at the corner of Kent avenue and South Ninth street, Williamsburg, is closed to-day and over two hundred men are thrown out of em-

The refinery was closed in obedience to an order issued by Theodore A. Havemeyer, President of the Sugar Trust, and the other refinery at North Third street will be closed before the end of the week. Then there will be 300 men added to the list of the unemployed. The refinery on Kent avenue had a dethe office, and at Havemeyer & Elder's office no information could be gleaned. John Searles, jr., Treasurer of the Have meyer and Elder Refining Company, said : 'The refineries close every year on Oct. 1 and open again about May 1. The sugar season is over, and that is their reason of shutting down. The firm takes care of its men by getting them employment elsewhere."

A workman whom the reporter met in the vicinity of the De Castro & Donner refinery told a different story.

'They take care of us? Not much: they don't even notify us a day abead when they will stop work. The refinery usually closes in December, and this sudden move on the part of the Trust has greatly surprised us.

'You see when we have work $35 a month is as much as we can make and we don't have a chance to save anything. Some of the men get employment in the malt houses while others work at odd jobs until the time comes around again to open."

A general police alarm is out for their capture.

That the pen is a most insecure place of confinement for desperate criminals is apparent to the most casual observer. Not only is the wire screen which covers its top a filmsy excuse at protection, but the door and lock are of such a frail character that a strong man might easily force them open and make a desperate and perhaps successful dash for liberty through the court-room.

December Wheat Jumps Up to

Nearly Ten Million Bushels Traded in the First Quarter Hour.

There was more excitement at the Produce Exchange this morning than has been known wild-eyed brokers and December wheat It was quite a jump from the figures of yes-

reports from Chicago that there was a margin of 10 cents either way; that they did not regard it as saie without such protection.

Just before the gong sounded the excitement was intense. The pit was fairly jammed with brokers, who had gone in prepared for a tussle, and every one who could find a foothold there clung to the outer elevation of the ring. The gallery was crowded with spectators who came expecting to see a lively skirmish, and they were not d sappointed.

At the first boom of the gong a yell burst from the throats of the 300 men in the grain corner such as has not been hear? on the floor of the Exchange for years.

The big traders were all represented by their brokers in the very centre of the pit. All of them were velling like so many Comanches at the top of their voices, and it was impossible for one on the outskirts of the throng to distinguish the bids at all.

Transactions in the December option were made at 113, 114, 115 and 116 at the very same instant in various parts of the pit.

Every one wanted to buy, and those who had anything to sell kept quiet.

Whenever a bid was taken the crowd would jump on the buyer with the ferocity of tigers and he would have to make for the outside ring in order to escape being knocked down and trampled under foot by the excited brokers.

Every sale created almost a riot and the scene was more more suggestive of an old-excitement around the wheat pit this morning when December opened at $1.11 a $1.12 and promptly went up to $1.14. Old "Hutch" is buy-ing on every break.
